Spring pothole, street-sweeping blitz kicks off

City crews taking to the roads today. Residents have mixed opinions on impact of municipal campaign

MORGAN MODJESKI
morgan.modjeski@metronews.ca

Street-sweeping and pothole-patching crews will be out in force on Monday as the city kicks off its spring maintenance blitz.

And some residents are stoked for the cleanup.

Darcy Marriott, a resident of the Nutana area, has been scraping gravel off a sidewalk near a backfill section on 11 Street East since the melt began, and it appears as if he'll get a break.

With cars driving over the backfill, which is used as a temporary fix by the city to fill areas affected by water main breaks, Marriott says it's resulted in the nearby sidewalk covered in grit.

"It's so people don't slip on the dirt when they're walking past," Marriott said of his efforts.

"Especially bikes and that, they can wipe out when it's gravelly — and even people can if they're walking."

Marriott is confident that the city's spring roadwork will help.

"Most definitely," he said. "And they do it quick. It's amazing how fast they do the whole city."

David Sibley of the City Park area said a pothole damaged his car last year. He's hoping the maintenance prevents a repeat.

"A lot of potholes are filled with gravel, which means they come back in a matter of days," Sibley said.

"I'm really looking forward to being able to leave my house and not destroy my car."

Public works director Pat Hyde said in a release that Saskatoon's revamped snow removal program has made an improvement "in helping to speed up the spring melt and reduce the development of potholes."

However, a King Crescent resident, who didn't want her name published, said she's skeptical that her road will see any benefit.

"I'll be really excited if they actually show up," she said.

"You have to dodge (potholes) or deal with bent rims and flat tires. It's terrible."

On Monday, city and contract crews will start on priority 1, 2 and 3 streets.

Construction at music venue nearing completion

The Capitol. Owners, operator want club to become cultural hub for musicians, fans

MORGAN MODJESKI
morgan.modjeski@metronews.ca

A piece of Saskatoon's music history is being revived downtown.

For some, the closure of Lydia's Pub last year left a hole in the local live music scene. A group of friends hopes to fill the gap with the opening of The Capitol.

Using furniture, stage lumber and the kitchen from Lydia's Pub, The Capitol's owners — including Sheepdogs guitarist Leot Hanson — want the new venue to retain an old legacy.

"It keeps the old history going in a new location," co-owner Mitch Lupichuk told Metro at the site on 1st Avenue North.

"(Lydia's) was there for 20 years, and they were a staple here in the city, in the music scene and all over the country," he added. "If you think of Saskatoon, Lydia's is one of the first things you think of for live music."

General manager Aiden Welter said music "is a really important part" of Saskatoon's culture.

"Mitch and I, both as young men, we grew up at Lydia's and were always exposed to live music," Welter said, noting that he sees The Capitol as a future hub for former patrons of Lydia's, and for others.

"The people that have been frequenting Lydia's for the last 20 years are going to feel some nostalgia," he said. "And hopefully, it'll feel like home."

While The Capitol has a private opening planned for the coming days, it will hold its first show in early May.

Circle Drive

Two charged after gun fired from moving car

Two male suspects are facing charges after a gun was fired from a moving vehicle at another car on Circle Drive early on Sunday.

Shortly after 2 a.m., city police received a complaint that a shot had been fired at a northbound vehicle on Circle at Attridge Drive.

No one was injured.

Officers arrested a 17-year-old boy on the 1600-block of Avenue H North about 5 a.m. and apprehended a 20-year-old man approximately an hour later in the area of Sturby Place.

Cold snap

Chilly weather continues in Saskatoon

The kind of snowfall Saskatoon saw on Sunday might continue through the week, as Environment Canada is predicting a spring cold snap.

According to meteorologist Mark Gerlyand, Saskatoon will remain about 10 C below the seasonal average as temperatures hover around the freezing mark until Thursday.

He explained that Sunday's snowfall was caused by a mass of cold air coming out of the northwest that became unstable when it met with heat from the April sun.

"When the air mass became unstable, this is when we got the flurry activity," he said.

"That was pretty much from Saskatoon all the way to North Battleford, up to Swift Current."

Gerlyand said Saskatoon will likely remain chilly.

"Thursday, finally, will be near zero," he said.

"On Friday, hopefully, we'll see near normal temperatures for this time of the year." MORGAN MODJESKI/METRO

Ukraine to launch action against pro-Russian forces

Army involvement. 'We're not going to allow Russia to repeat the Crimean scenario,' president says

Emergency meeting

Ukraine is launching a "large-scale anti-terrorist operation" to resist attacks of armed pro-Russian forces, Ukraine's President Oleksandr Turchynov said on Sunday in a televised address.

The authorities in Kyiv will use the army in order to prevent Russian forces from moving in, as they did in Crimea, Turchynov said, pledging amnesty to anyone laying down arms by Monday morning.

"The Security Council has made a decision to begin a large-scale anti-terrorist operation with participation of army forces," he said. "We're not going to allow Russia to repeat the Crimean scenario in Ukraine's east."

Ukrainian special forces exchanged gunfire with a pro-Russia militia in an eastern city Sunday morning, with at least one security officer killed and five others wounded. It was the first reported gun battle in eastern Ukraine, where armed pro-Russia men have seized a number of government buildings in recent days.

Speaking late Sunday on Russian state television, ousted president Viktor Yanukovych accused the CIA of being behind the new government's decision to turn to force, a claim the CIA denied as "completely false."

Unrest has spread to several municipalities in eastern Ukraine, including the major industrial city of Donetsk, which has a large Russian-speaking population and was the support base for Yanukovych. THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Flight 370

Black box batteries may be dead

Following four strong underwater signals in the past week, all has gone quiet in the hunt for the missing Malaysia Airlines jet, meaning the batteries in the plane's all-important black boxes may finally have died.

Despite having no new transmissions from the black boxes' locator beacons to go on, air and sea crews were continuing their search in the southern Indian Ocean on Sunday for debris and any sounds that may still be emanating.

No new electronic pings have been detected since Tuesday by an Australian ship dragging a U.S. navy device that listens for flight recorder signals. Once officials are confident that no more sounds will be heard — and that they have narrowed the search area as much as possible — a robotic submersible will be sent down to slowly scour for wreckage. Taxman back. CRA says it's fixed Heartbleed bug

The federal tax agency says its online services are up and running again after it blocked public access five days ago due to the Heartbleed bug.

The Canada Revenue Agency says the security risk has been addressed, but added it will not apply interest or penalties to individual taxpayers filing their 2013 tax returns after April 30 for a period equal to the length of the service interruption.

Revenue Minister Kerry-Lynne Findlay says that means 2013 tax returns filed by May 5 will not incur interest or penalties.

Service has also been restored to all publicly accessible Government of Canada websites, the Treasury Board said in a release.

The Heartbleed bug is caused by a flaw in OpenSSL software, which is commonly used on the Internet to provide security and privacy.

The bug has the potential to expose private data.

U.S. looking into new Syria toxic gas claims

Opposition-held village. Both sides blame each other for alleged attack that reportedly injured scores of people

The U.S. ambassador to the United Nations said Sunday that reports of a poison gas attack Friday in a rural village north of Damascus were so far "unsubstantiated," adding that the United States was trying to establish what really happened.

Opposition groups, including the main Western-backed Syrian National Coalition, said the poison gas attack at Kfar Zeita hurt dozens of people, though it did not identify the gas used. State-run Syrian television blamed members of the al-Qaida-linked Nusra Front rebel group for the attack, saying they used chlorine gas to kill two people and injured more than 100. It did not say how it confirmed chlorine was used.

An opposition activist said government helicopters dropped a number of barrel bombs on the village that appeared to carry the toxic gas, killing one person and choking about 100 people, many of them in their homes.

In the Syrian capital, President Bashar Assad said the conflict was shifting in the government's favour after a string of government triumphs against rebels. Assad's forces also have struck local ceasefire agreements with the opposition in a number of neighbourhoods, where weary rebels have turned over their weapons in exchange for an easing of suffocating blockades.

Getting a taste of the new Tangerine

HOW TO ROLL
Alison Griffiths
metronews.ca

The words love and bank don't often appear together when we talk about financial institutions. One exception is the late ING Direct because of its un-bank-like plain language, straightforward loan process and higher rates on savings accounts than the Big Five.

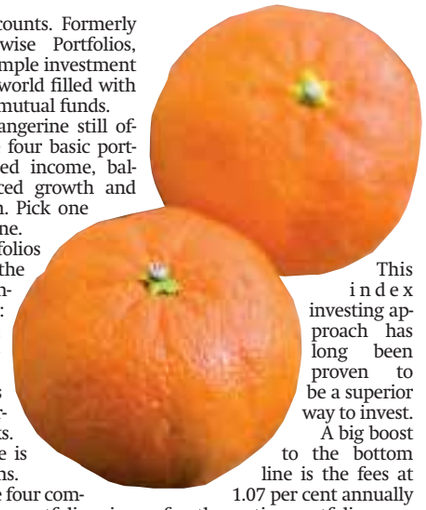
ING Direct, purchased in 2012 by Scotiabank, rebranded itself as Tangerine on April 8. Seriously? A fruit for a bank?

The name might not inspire confidence but the bosses of the orange-hued bank assure us that the best of ING Direct is still in place at Tangerine.

For investors, this includes one-stop-shopping portfolios for RRSPs, Tax Free Savings Accounts (TFSA) and non-registered accounts. Formerly called Streetwise Portfolios, they offer a simple investment solution in a world filled with thousands of mutual funds.

Happily, Tangerine still offers the same four basic portfolios: balanced income, balanced, balanced growth and equity growth. Pick one and you're done.

The portfolios all contain the same four investments: Canadian bonds, Canadian stocks, U.S. stocks and international stocks. The difference is the proportions.



Each of the four components in the portfolios simply copy or track an index, like the S&P/TSX 60 Index (Canada) or the S&P 500 Index (U.S.). This index investing approach has long been proven to be a superior way to invest.

A big boost to the bottom line is the fees at 1.07 per cent annually for the entire portfolio compared to around 2.25 per cent for Canadian equity mutual funds.

Pick your portfolio

- Balanced income is the most conservative, with 70 per cent in bonds, which are lower risk than stocks, and just 30 per cent divided among Canadian, U.S. and international stocks.
- The least conservative is equity growth, with 25 per cent in bonds, 50 per cent in Canadian stocks and 25 per cent in U.S. and international stocks.

Yes, you can invest more cheaply but these portfolios do all the work for you.

Tangerine offers an excellent way for beginning through to seasoned investors to have a diversified portfolio with a single purchase.

World Fair 1964: Hits & misses

The millions of visitors who attended the New York World's Fair in 1964 were introduced to a range of technological innovations and predictions. Some turned out to be right on the money and others, perhaps thankfully, were way off the mark.

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS FILE

Hit: Personal use of computers

Several pavilions had exhibits set up where visitors could ask computers for information and get responses in seconds.

Miss: Colonies on the moon and underwater

The "Futurama 2" ride from General Motors featured images of people living in places where they clearly, uh, don't.

Hit: Picturephones

Bell System introduced this innovation, which allowed people to see who they were calling. It didn't go over well at the time, but it's a concept that's an everyday part of our lives now in apps such as Skype and FaceTime.

Miss: Jet packs

There were demonstrations of jet pack power at the fair, with men zooming around the grounds. Sadly, they remain a mode of transport found mainly in science fiction.

Hubb aiming to become Tinder of music industry

App. Two Calgary entrepreneurs believe Hubb Music could empower artists, fans

Borrowing the addictive "swipe left, swipe right" interface from the wildly popular Tinder dating app, a pair of Calgary entrepreneurs believe their own startup could see the same success and turn the music industry on its head in the process.

"It can redefine the way artists use the engine that is commercial music," co-founder Nathan Hurd said of Hubb Music, which is set to launch an app for beta testing in May.

"We're really empowering the artists and fans to come together and connect," added co-founder Zack Lister. "And we're giving artists new ways to monetize their fan base, other than just playing a show or selling a song."

Similar to Tinder, Hubb Music allows users to browse through potential musical matches, offering short previews of songs and enabling users to either dismiss or add an artist to their collection.

For fans, the app offers the chance to quickly curate a mobile music collection, as well as a fun and intuitive way to find new music.

For artists, it offers an opportunity to make direct sales to fans who have "liked" them, including everything from merchandise to offering VIP experiences, like personal Skype conversations or private meet-and-greets after shows.

It also offers artists, as businesspeople, something potentially even more valuable — aggregated demographic, geographic, and spending habit data on their target markets.

Kitimat residents vote 'No' in oil pipeline plebiscite

The residents of Kitimat, B.C. have voted against the proposed Northern Gateway pipeline project in a non-binding plebiscite.

The ballot count from Saturday's vote was 1,793 opposed versus 1,278 who supported the multibillion- dollar project — a margin of 58.4 per cent to 41.6 per cent.

The results from two polling stations and an advance vote all showed a clear majority for the no side.

The $6.5-billion project would see two pipelines, one carrying oilsands' bitumen from Alberta to Kitimat's port, and a second carrying condensate — a form of natural gas used to dilute the bitumen — from Kitimat back to Alberta.

The federal cabinet is expected to release its decision on Northern Gateway by June.

LET'S CURB OUR PARKING ISSUE

URBAN COMPASS

Christina Cherneskey

saskatoon@metronews.ca

The city halls in Saskatoon and Regina have heavy burdens to bear. Our unprecedented growth in Saskatchewan has contributed to a huge problem in the major cities — a shortage of parking space.

In Regina, it's downtown. Most government employees park their vehicles on streets, preventing any sort of actual commerce. Small, local businesses suffer. Many regret even trying to establish themselves downtown.

In Saskatoon, it's City Park. This area is a magnet for health-care workers' cars. Pity the tax-paying residents who cannot even park in front of their homes. City Park has become the city's parking lot.

The City of Regina has a few approaches — it has doubled its number of parking officers to 16, and 10 concentrate on downtown. Drivers still park their vehicles on the streets all weekday long. The price at the meters has also doubled, but it hasn't slowed down the habitual parkers.

Saskatoon's City Park is an eyesore. Council is mulling over an increase in parking meters along Queen Street and a reduction of two-hour parking zones to one hour. More analysis will take place. And the problem will continue to get worse.

Rumour has it that some of the street parkers even have rogue "parking professionals" who move vehicles during the day for those who work at the hospital.

I suspect that both councils are enjoying the revenue that must gush into their coffers when these people are ticketed. What with increased meter rates in Regina, more ticketing constables, higher fines, shorter parking periods, the money should be flowing. But it's not stopping the problem. In fact, it only exacerbates it.

There needs to be extra vision given to this situation. For starters, tag the cars, then tow them. Then set up more transit service from unused parking lots to these busy, over-parked areas. Have dedicated shuttle buses running frequently.

At Toronto's Pearson International Airport, there are more than 40,000 employees. Not one of them can park near the airport. Instead, they park at a distance and are shuttled to Pearson.

By contrast, more than 25,000 people work in downtown Regina. They can park where they like, as they please.

There is no concern for potential customers, existing businesses or those who need to go to banks.

Councils should see this imbalance and err on the side of homeowners and entrepreneurs who bear the brunt of this fiasco. Stop over-studying this and see the situation for what it really is.

Ottawa youth worker creates 'ultimate' camp for neighbourhood youth

CONTRIBUTED

Who: Fahd Alhattab, 20, youth mentor, from Ottawa
What: Co-founded the York Street Ultimate March Break Camp, a one-week experience offered free to children from low-income communities.
Why: To pay forward the mentorship and support he received while growing up by mentoring youth in his community.

Arriving in Canada from his native Kuwait in 1998, Fahd Alhattab grew up in a low-income Ottawa neighbourhood and turned to his role models at the Boys and Girls Club for hope and inspiration. In 2011, he teamed up with friend Muhammad Zaman to give back to their community by starting a camp for local youth. This year, the pair raised $14,000 to welcome 60 kids for a week of fun — from science workshops to a field trip to a reptile zoo!

What motivated you and Muhammad to launch the March break camp in your community?
"We loved our school and the neighbourhood, but as we grew up and started volunteering, we recognized how difficult that neighbourhood is for the current youth population. So we decided to start a March break camp for these kids. We assembled a team of friends and colleagues and started planning. It's a little baby of ours, something we're really proud of. It takes work but it's worth it at the end of every year."

How do you feel when you see youth participating in your camp experience? "It feels good, it feels warm! For those of us that can be leaders, it's a responsibility. I'm able to fulfill my responsibility to these kids because someone helped my family get out of the socio-economic distress in that neighbourhood. I owe it to the people who helped me and I owe it to the kids that are here." CRAIG AND MARC KIELBURGER

Relationships can be bloody difficult

Only Lovers Left Alive. Tom Hiddleston talks about starring in a post-Twilight saga vampire love story

NED EHRBAR
Metro World News in Hollywood

Only Lovers Left Alive opens on April 25. CONTRIBUTED

With Only Lovers Left Alive, British actor Tom Hiddleston teams up with Tilda Swinton and director Jim Jarmusch to wrestle the vampire genre back from the Twilight crowd, with Hiddleston and Swinton starring as two moody, music-obsessed bloodsuckers who can't live without each other.

Was there any hesitation about stepping into the vampire world?
Absolutely none. It was amazing. I met Jim Jarmusch in November 2011, and I'd just finished shooting Avengers, and I was in New York for War Horse, which was just opening, and I was about to shoot the Shakespeare plays for PBS. So there (were) superheroes and soldiers and Shakespeare, and I met Jim and he said, "I'm going to make a film about love, and it's about two very delicate, sophisticated creatures who love music and poetry and nature. He's a kind of rock star musician who's also a kind of scientist and physicist, and she's a poet. Oh, and by the way, they're vampires (laughs)."

The vampire theme was really a framing for Jim to attempt a narrative about this theme of love, acceptance, time, creativity and mortality.

When you first watched the film with an audience, were you surprised people found it so funny?
It was really pleasing, actually, because we wanted there to be levity and lightness in it, and humour, but not in a way that seemed to be overreaching. We didn't want to seem like we were pandering to the audience in bad taste, which would dilute the integrity of the attempt. And the attempt was really to make something very delicate and sophisticated and refined about love and acceptance and time and art and music and poetry. These are big themes, and we didn't want to seem heavy-handed. Jim wanted to be very light on his feet. So hearing the laughter is thrilling, truly, because when you're delivering deadpan stuff about the literature of the world, you want people to get it.

I loved that John Hurt plays Christopher Marlowe.
Yeah, it's a lovely joke that Christopher Marlowe is still alive and well, living in Tangier with a portrait of Shakespeare on his wall with a knife through (his) head.

Swinton or Hemsworth?

We asked Hiddleston if he had to choose between looking at Tilda Swinton or Chris Hemsworth all day, who would he choose. "The dance is different, but I love dancing with both of them," he said laughing.

Some Love Letters from England

Metronomy. English electro-pop band's new album is being hailed as a 'breakthrough'

RICHARD PECKETT
Metro World News in London

"Why is everyone imagining there's something wrong with me?" queries Joseph Mount, singer for English electro-pop band Metronomy.

People think he's in relationship meltdown, thanks to a few lovesick songs from the maestro's latest album. He's not, and the simpering is as welcome as that insincere offer of "If you ever want to talk about it, you know I'm here."

In truth, the 31-year-old auteur has every reason to be as euphoric as the Love Letters title track's chorus thanks to strong sales. Mount and his bandmates — Gbenga Adelekan (bass guitar), Anna Prior (drums) and Oscar Cash (guitar) — have once again had a change of tune for their fourth studio album, taking their retro-infused record back to the sound of the '60s.

Love Letters is being referred to as a 'breakthrough.' Does that add pressure on you to perform?
Funnily enough, it does in a way. It doesn't add pressure on me but it does make the situation a bit more pressurized. It's already got to number 7 in the [British] charts and it's selling really well. If breakthrough means we're going to get played on BBC Radio 1, then I don't think it's going to be a breakthrough record. But you do get closer to holding the badge of being known as an English band. Each record we're getting closer to being part of the establishment.

Is it important to keep that Englishness at the core of your music?
The more I experience American attitudes toward English music, the more I want it to be English.

Quoted

"I don't think it's going to be a breakthrough record. But you do get closer to holding to badge of being known as an English band."
Metronomy singer Joseph Mount

Americans lap up the accent and our quaint culture.
[Chuckles] Well, yeah. But then some English music seems such an alien thing to them.

Your album's called Love Letters, so have you ever sent one?
I have. Well, they were probably never sent but I did used to write nice affectionate letters to girlfriends.

Were they handwritten letters?
Of course, yeah.

Metronomy is enjoying strong sales of their album Love Letters. CONTRIBUTED

OUR TAKE ON THE WORLD OF CELEBRITIES

The Word

Who will take up the truthiness torch?

MELINDA TAUB
Metro World News in New York

"I gotta tell you, I do not envy whoever they try to put in that chair. Folks, those are some huge shoes to fill and some really big pants," Stephen Colbert said last night of David Letterman's retirement. He was, as is his wont, joking, of course; Colbert himself will inherit The Late Show from Letterman in 2015, becoming its second-ever host. But his quip raises a question: Who will replace Colbert, now that The Colbert Report is ending?

Comedy Central hasn't made any announcements — understandable, since the gap in their schedule is still almost a year away. But all these late-night musical chairs have whetted my appetite for more speculation. Here are a few worthy replacements for that plum 11:30 p.m. slot.

Samantha Bee: The Colbert Report was a rousing success for almost 10 years. Since spinning off a performer from The Daily Show worked once, why not try it again? Bee is hilarious and she's been on The Daily Show forever. She and her husband, fellow correspondent Jason Jones, could do a his-and-hers talk show.

Craig Ferguson: Since Ferguson was passed over for the Late Show throne in favour of Colbert, speculation is rampant that he'll depart CBS when his contract is up next year. Maybe he and Colbert can play musical talk shows and Ferguson can slide into Colbert's old slot. A smaller cable audience might be a better fit for him anyway: He's always had a weird take on the hosting gig.

Chris Gethard: The Chris Gethard Show is a cult favourite public access show that recently taped a pilot for Comedy Central. The strange, go-for-broke show features live calls from fans, a cast of recurring characters like The Human Fish and, occasionally, peril for the host, who's prone to do things like sit in a vat of ice cream for hours and get freezer burn on his skin. The new hole in Comedy Central's schedule hasn't escaped the show's dedicated fans: #GethardAfterDailyShow is already making the rounds on social media.

Debbie Rowe seeking custody of Jackson kids

Debbie Rowe

Michael Jackson's ex-wife Debbie Rowe is reportedly seeking custody of two of the late singer's kids because their current co-guardians are "ineffective," according to TMZ. Rowe, who is the biological mother of 17-year-old Prince and 16-year-old Paris, thinks the Jackson family compound isn't a suitable environment for the teens because of the bad influence family members like Jermaine Jackson provide. While Rowe is reportedly seeking to move the two to her Palmdale, Calif., ranch, she is not seeking any remuneration.

Robert Pattinson and Kristen Stewart

Are RPatz and KStew eternal partners?

While fans were shocked to learn of Kristen Stewart's 2012 affair with director Rupert Sanders, then-boyfriend Robert Pattinson probably wasn't that surprised, according to Radar Online. "When they were officially dating, they always had a policy of 100 per cent honesty, which did create issues. Robert was always very frank about his flings with other women, and that worked for Kristen, too," a source says. "They had an open relationship, and it's amazing that Kristen didn't reveal this info when she was being painted as a 'Jezebel.' Rob has had other women on the side and Kristen has had other women and men as well. Their relationship was always a business and a spiritual partnership more than a romantic one." And, the source adds, the couple's breakup was equally as matter-of-fact: "They were pretty upfront with each other when they got sick and tired of each other. It was the strangest relationship, but keeping each other at arm's length is working in their favour," the source explains.

"Kristen and Rob are still close and definitely in contact, and they still sleep together when the opportunity comes up."

Not so Pitt-ure perfect behind closed doors

Brad Pitt and Angelina Jolie ALL PHOTOS: GETTY IMAGES

Angelina Jolie and Brad Pitt may project an air of effortless domestic bliss, but a few catty sources are more than happy to dispel that myth, telling Star magazine that everything behind the scenes is not as it seems. First of all, there's Jolie's "very controlling ways" when it comes to public image. "Angie controls her press and image with an iron fist. She likes to project this kind of hippie, Audrey Hepburn thing, where she flies around the world doing all the selfless stuff, but it's all orchestrated," the source says, adding that the actress and humanitarian "is very controlling of Brad and his press, his wardrobe — everything. He does what she says, but in private he likes to smoke cigarettes and marijuana. He's a huge stoner."

Kids need money to learn

Allowances. The best way to teach children about money is to give them their own dough to manage

GAIL VAZ-OXLADE
Gail blogs daily at gailvazoxlade.com

Allowances provide lessons kids can take to the piggy bank. ISTOCK

Before children can learn to manage money well, they first need to be able to get their sticky little fingers on the stuff. Most people have no problem with that concept. But when it comes to what you should require of your children in exchange for that allowance, the debate rages. Some people feel an allowance should have no strings attached. Others think it should be tied to chores in the home, school grades or behaviour: "If you don't smarten up, I'll cut off your allowance!"

Just as the allowance debate is strongly pro and con on the idea of attaching strings, so too is the debate about whether or not kids should work for their money. Some parents feel that school is a child's job, and any other work detracts from potential success at school. Others think that a part-time job is perfectly fine, while still others believe that a part-time job is essential because it begins the development of a good work ethic.

From early on, children receive mixed messages about money. At home they hear one thing, at school and among their peers, another. Mom does it one way; Dad is the complete opposite. What is consistent is that nobody seems able to agree on the money rules. And often those mixed messages stay with kids long after your parental influence has passed.

I'm of the school that believes that allowances should come strings-free and that it's perfectly fine for children to get a part-time job to supplement their allowance — not to replace it — when they get older.

Think about why you're giving your kid an allowance. The objective should be to teach him money-management skills. The fact that you work hard for your money will be brought home when your child learns relative value — how many hours he has to work to afford that pair of running shoes.

Money doesn't work as a reward for good behaviour. Just ask any of the management theorists who have proven that money is not a motivator for adults. So why should it be for children? Good behaviour is based on an understanding of right and wrong, thoughtfulness, caring and consideration, along with myriad other positive attributes, all of which have to be internalized.

Good grades are your child's responsibility. School is his primary job and good grades are an indication that he is doing his job well. If you provide financial reward for good grades, you are externalizing the reward. Instead, the reward should be internalized: The self-esteem and pride that accompanies having done well.

As for an allowance being payment for chores, who pays you to do the chores in your home? Chores are a part of each individual's responsibility to the family. Payment for regular chores negates a child's individual responsibility as a member of the family unit. (Payment for extra household tasks — those above and beyond a child's normal chores — is fine when they are specifically doing the task to earn some money.)

The biggest problem in tying your child's allowance to the completion of her chores comes on the day when you must withdraw the allowance. Now you're teaching your child, "I have the money and you'll have to do as I say to get some of it!" That's a straight-out power play. "I have the money, so I have the power." A far better tack for children who don't follow through on household responsibilities is to do a like-for-like comparison. "Darling daughter, if you don't make your bed, I'm going to have to. And I only have time to do one thing, make your bed or make your lunch. Which one do you want to do?"

Whatever your own experiences with money as a child, try to put them aside as you begin to teach your children how money works and the role it should play in their lives. To ensure money is not imbued with meanings it should have, don't tie things like self-esteem, power or love to money. Stay balanced when you talk about it. And, above all, figure out what message you want your children to get from your money lessons. For, like it or not, they are learning from you. What lesson would you like your child to learn today?

Let the steady flow of funds begin

To learn how to manage money responsibly, children need a steady flow of funds they can rely on.

- The experience of handling a weekly allowance will teach many fundamental skills, including how to manage a cash flow, how to plan ahead, the skill of setting goals (both short- and long-term) and how to save to satisfy a goal.
- With your guidance, this cash flow can also be used to teach important lessons in borrowing and lending, the pleasure derived from sharing, and how to be a good consumer.

Turning co-workers into a community

Try reading up on the news before work, so you can contribute interesting nuggets that people find informative and that generate conversation. ISTOCK

If you have a full-time job, chances are the office is your primary home. Try to fight the idea as much as you want, but in the end, it's the cold, hard truth.

"When you think of the amount of time an individual spends at work, it's more time than they spend with their family," says Gerlinde Herrmann, president of The Herrmann Group, an HR consulting firm.

That's why it's so important to develop a sense of community at work. Walking into a warm, pleasant environment each day can have a profound impact on your well-being. And guess what — the power to improve this community spirit lies squarely in your hands. Here are three steps you can take to build fellowship at work.

Conversations

The first key to building community spirit is conversation. This means being in a workplace where people actually talk to each other. Focus on common interests that your co-workers may share, such as current events.

Office get-togethers

An office outing is the next step in uniting your colleagues. Don't be afraid to venture from the traditional company dinner.

Rearranging the office space

Rearranging the office to foster community spirit can range from removing high walls from cubicles, creating collaboration rooms, and making a centralized water cooler.

LESSONS FROM THE DESERT
life@metronews.ca

The severe market crash in October 2008 changed my life. I started running to regain my health, both emotional and physical. Shortly after I took my first steps, I ran the Gobi March in China in June '09, followed by the Atacama Crossing in Chile in '10 and the Sahara Race in Egypt in '11. In this post, I share a lesson about life, learned from the desert.

Training for the Gobi, I needed to find ways to spend more time on my legs to replicate an average day in the desert. Once in the desert, I would be running for five to eight hours in soft sand each day, as opposed to three to five hours on pavement.

Get up, stand up

My energy level increased and consequently so did the intentionality and quality of my conversations.

The first steps were simple. I sold my vehicle and stopped taking elevators. And then the big idea came: work standing up. Over the course of a month, I transitioned 20 years of sitting habits into a new routine of working while standing. Here's why and how it can benefit you, too.

Standing eight or more hours a day strengthened my legs and back for the race, and for other activities. And then the following unexpectedly occurred:

1) Standing and walking while at the office helped me lose 30 pounds in three months, "free burning" up to 25 per cent more calories per day (free because it doesn't feel like exercise).

2) Having an open-door policy, more than 30 unplanned meetings occur in my office daily. Without a chair to sit on, these now "stand-up meetings" became very expedient: Everyone got to the point faster, giving me newfound time to focus on other priorities.

3) Live or on the phone with a headset, moving around allowed me to engage my arms and body in my conversations. My energy level increased and consequently so did the intentionality and quality of my conversations.

Some of life's gifts come from being forced to change ingrained habits. Being overburdened like most of you meant I needed to go about my training more creatively. As a result, my training's most precious gift is that I haven't sat since. Walking is a perfect way towards a healthy lifestyle — try it for yourself and let me know how it goes.

Sweet, simple maple and pecan tilapia will make for a delightful Passover dish

FLASH FOOD
From your fridge to your table in 30 minutes or less

This recipe serves four. ROSE REISMAN

For Passover, this is a perfect entrée whereby all the ingredients are kosher for the holiday. Keep in mind the only nuts not allowed are peanuts and sesame seeds. The pecans, honey and maple syrup simmer together until the sauce becomes syrupy and thick.

Immediately pour half the sauce over the fish while it's still warm.

To prevent the sauce from sticking, use parchment paper on your baking sheet. If the sauce becomes too thick to pour, gently reheat. Tilapia is one of the leanest fish with only 129 calories and 2 ½ grams of fat for 3 oz.

Pecans contain vitamin E, which is a natural antioxidant that helps protect against cell damage and fights Alzheimer's, Parkinson's, cancer and heart disease. They are also a naturally good source of protein.

You can always use a food thermometer when cooking fish. Place the prong into the thickest part of the fish, and when the temperature reaches 125°F the fish is medium-cooked. The fish continues cooking for at least 5 minutes after this time, so you don't want to overcook the fish or it will be dry.

Directions

1. Heat the oven to 425°F. Spray a nonstick baking pan with cooking oil or line with parchment paper.

2. Place the pecans in a small, nonstick frying pan and toast over medium-high heat for 3 minutes or until golden and fragrant. Stir in the honey, maple syrup and butter. Reduce the heat to low and cook for 3 minutes or until slightly thickened. Pour half the sauce over the tilapia on the baking pan.

3. Bake the tilapia, cooking for 10 minutes per inch thickness of the fish or until the fish flakes easily when pierced with a fork.

4. Reheat the remaining sauce and serve with fish. Garnish with parsley.

Bubba bursts rookies' bubbles

The Masters. Watson holds off first-time Augusta competitors Spieth, Blixt for his second green jacket

Adam Scott presents Bubba Watson with the green jacket after Watson won the 2014 Masters Tournament on Sunday in Augusta, Ga. It was Watson's second time winning. Scan the above image with the Metro News app to see how Watson celebrated. ANDREW REDINGTON/GETTY IMAGES

Bubba Watson's second Masters title was nothing like the green jacket he won two years ago.

The only daring shot Watson hit was one he really didn't need. The wild swing in momentum came on the front nine, not the back nine of Augusta National. And the sweetest difference of all Sunday was seeing his two-year-old son walk toward him on the edge of the 18th green after his three-shot victory over Jordan Spieth.

Watson turned in another masterpiece and joined an elusive group as the 17th player to win the Masters more than once.

He turned a two-shot deficit into a two-shot lead on the final two holes of the front nine, then kept Spieth, 20, and everyone else at safe distance the rest of the way. Watson closed with a 3-under 69 to beat a pair of Masters rookies in Spieth and Jonas Blixt of Sweden.

Two years ago, when he hit that wild hook out of the trees on the 10th hole to win in a playoff, his wife and newly adopted son were watching at home in Florida. This time, young Caleb was decked out in a green-and-white striped Masters shirt and green tennis shoes as he waddled over to his father.

"This one's a lot different," Watson said. "The first one, for me, it was almost like I lucked into it."

After high-fiving the crowd on his way to sign his card, Watson returned to Butler Cabin to take back that green jacket he slipped on Adam Scott a year ago.

"After giving it away last year, I wanted it back," Watson said. "I told Adam we could just swap it back and forth every year." THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Devils goalie emotional after season-ending win

Standing on the podium after what might have been the final game of his record-setting, 20-year career with the New Jersey Devils, Martin Brodeur's eyes welled with tears when he was asked to describe his emotions.

Just 15 minutes earlier, after making 16 saves in a season-ending 3-2 win over Boston on Sunday, the soon-to-be 42-year-old goalie stood at centre ice and gave a stick salute to the crowd as his teammates stood in front of the bench and banged their sticks.

As he was interviewed the sellout crowd chanted: "Thank You, Marty! Thank You, Marty!"

NBA. DeRozan fires on all cylinders to top Pistons

DeMar DeRozan scored 14 of his 30 points in the fourth quarter, and the Toronto Raptors tied a franchise record for victories with a 116-107 win over the Detroit Pistons on Sunday.

The Raptors (47-33) had already clinched the Atlantic Division, and the victory over Detroit was their 10th in 14 games. Toronto has now reached the 47-win mark for the third time. The Raptors went 47-35 in 2001 and 2007.

Kyle Lowry scored 28 points for Toronto before fouling out with 5:51 remaining.

Andre Drummond had 14 points and 17 rebounds for the Pistons in the final home game of their dismal season.

Horoscopes

♈ Aries
March 21 - April 20
You may not be in control of what happens today but you can control the way you react to it. The more colleagues and loved ones mess you around the more you must strive to not let it get to you.

♉ Taurus
April 21 - May 21
You may have your suspicions about someone but the planets warn this is probably not the right time to go public with them. You should keep your thoughts to yourself, at least for the time being.

♊ Gemini
May 22 - June 21
Be careful with your cash because wealth planet Pluto begins one of its retrograde phases today. What does that mean in plain language? It means you could easily make a costly mistake.

♋ Cancer
June 22 - July 23
Do as you please over the next 24 hours and don't worry too much about the consequences. A day or two from now everyone will be on your side again, so why worry?

♌ Leo
July 24 - Aug. 23
Don't try too hard to stay on top of your workload today. The deadlines you have set yourself are unnecessary — no one will think less of you if you fail to meet them.

♍ Virgo
Aug. 24 - Sept. 23
The message of the stars this week is you must not start anything you may not be able to finish. Don't make promises you may not be able to keep. If you don't aim so high you'll look good when you do more.

♎ Libra
Sept. 24 - Oct. 23
Disruption of one sort or another is inevitable today. Whatever happens, keep telling yourself it's not as bad as it seems and promise yourself that you will keep your emotions in check.

♏ Scorpio
Oct. 24 - Nov. 22
This is not a good time to make hasty decisions, not with Pluto, your ruler, beginning one of its retrograde phases. What seems like a good idea today may turn out to be the one thing you should have avoided, so take care.

♐ Sagittarius
Nov. 23 - Dec. 21
There will be times over the next few days when you seem out of your depth but that is not an excuse to give up. If you do you will likely regret it as the planets bring new self-belief and new opportunities.

♑ Capricorn
Dec. 22 - Jan. 20
Pluto, planet of power, turns retrograde in your sign today, which among other things suggests that your grip on certain situations may not be as strong as you thought.

♒ Aquarius
Jan. 21 - Feb. 19
Be careful what you decide today because once you have made up your mind about something the planets won't let you change back again.

♓ Pisces
Feb. 20 - March 20
No matter how self-reliant a Pisces you may be you must make an effort to work hand-in-hand with other people over the next few days. You will create a lot of useful goodwill. SALLY BROMPTON
